

Scott H. Solomon

WORK: President, Halliday Financial Wealth Management, Chief Operating Officer

Scott joined Halliday Financial in 2002 at the Glen Head office in Long Island as a Financial Advisor. After just a year, he was asked by management to assist in opening the Albany office. The following year, he was promoted to Regional Vice President. From there, Scott continued to move up the ranks, becoming Executive Vice President in 2006, COO in 2008, to CEO in 2010. Presently, he is both President and COO.

Under Scott's leadership, Halliday has opened up three new offices, tripled revenue in that same time, and has more than doubled the number of advisors. Additionally, under Scott's direction, Halliday's scope of services has broadened to include tax preparation, retirement planning, capital markets, and trust services.

Scott currently resides in Clifton Park with his wife, Brandi, and their three children. In his spare time, Scott enjoys volunteering with many local charities and organizations, including but not limited to the Ronald McDonald House, Northern Rivers Family Society, Interface Partnership for the Homeless, Albany Women's Shelter, Albany Rescue Mission, and Coaches Versus Cancer. He has taught classes for Junior Achievement, as well as classes for continuing education.

Scott even extends his volunteer efforts to engage in his love of hockey: he is President of the board at Tech Valley Hockey, which encompasses roughly 85 teams locally; he's a board member of the American Collegiate Hockey Association; and for a decade, Scott was the head coach for the University at Albany's ice hockey team.

Education

Scott holds a bachelor's degree from the University at Albany, where he earned the Presidential Leadership Award for excellence in a leadership role. Scott also engaged in post graduate work, has completed his FINRA licenses, and holds a degree from the College of Financial Planning.